

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE POOR PRINTER.—"I pity the poor Printer," said my Uncle Toby. "He's a poor creature," rejoined Trim. "How so?" said my Uncle. "Because, in the first place," continued the Corporal, looking full upon my Uncle, "because he must endeavor to please everybody. In the negligence of a moment, perhaps, a small paragraph pops upon him; he hastily throws it to the compositor, it is inserted, and he is ruined to all intents and purposes." "Too much the case, Trim," said my Uncle, with a deep sigh, "too much the case." "And please your honor," continued Trim, elevating his voice and striking into an imploring attitude, "this is not the whole." "Go on Trim," said my Uncle, feelingly. "The printer sometimes hits upon a piece that pleases him mightily, and he thinks it cannot but go down with his subscribers. But alas, sir, who can calculate the human mind? He inserts it, and it is all over with him. They forgive others, but they cannot forgive a printer. He has a host to print for, and every one sets up for a critic. The pretty Miss exclaims, 'Why don't he give us more poetry and marriages, and bon mots?' away with these stale pieces." The politician claps his specs on his nose, and reads it over in search of a violent invective. He finds none, takes his specs off, folds them and sticks them in his pocket, declaring the paper good for nothing but to burn; so it goes. Every one thinks it ought to be printed expressly for himself, as he is a subscriber; and yet after all this complaining, would you believe it, sir," said the Corporal, clapping his hands beseechingly, "would you believe it, sir, there are some subscribers who do not hesitate to cheat the printer out of his pay?—Our army swore terribly in Flanders, but they never did anything so bad as that. 'Never,' said my Uncle Toby, emphatically, 'Never!'"

COTTON.—The stock in Liverpool, when taken last week, was about 700,000 bales, against 202,000 at the same date last year. The quantity afloat is estimated at 300,000. The weekly consumption, which is at present large, may be set down as 46,000. Any further appreciable rise in the value of the raw material, out of proportion to the advance that may be obtained on the manufactured article could certainly check the demand. The year's consumption may therefore be calculated at about 2,400,000 bales. The exports, taking the same proportion of deliveries as in the first year, would be nearly 900,000 bales. Hence the total requirements would be about 3,300,000 bales for the next year. To meet this we have our stock and the supply afloat—1,000,000 bales—and the crops of America, Brazil, Egypt, China, and Japan, to say nothing of occasional aids from Turkey and the West Indies. Supposing the available portion of the American crop to be only 1,000,000 bales—a quantity lower than the lowest estimate and adding an importation from all other countries at the same rate as the previous receipts this year, we should have two million and a half bales more. Thus there would be a supply of four million and a half bales in all for the year, to meet a total demand internal and external; of less than three million and a half.

INTEGRITY.—Truth has all the advantages of appearances, and many more; and, upon every account, sincerity is true wisdom. As to the affairs of this world, integrity hath many advantages over all the arts of dissimulation and deceit. It is much plainer and easier, much the safer and more secure way; it hath less of trouble and difficulties of entanglement and perplexity, of danger and hazard; it is the shortest and nearest way to our end, carrying us thither in a straight line, and will hold out at last, when deceit and cunning, which continually grow weaker and less effectual, will finally fail us.

WASHING SILK.—No person should ever wring or crush a piece of silk when it is wet, because the creases thus made will remain always if the silk is thick and hard. The way to wash silk is to spread it smoothly upon a clean board, rub it with white soap, and brush it with a clean hard brush. The silk must be rubbed until the grease is extracted; then the soap should be brushed off with clean, cold water, applied to both sides. The cleansing of silk is a very nice operation. Most of the colors are liable to be extracted by washing in hot suds, especially blue and green colors. A little alum dissolved in the last water that is brushed on silk tends to prevent the colors from running. Alcohol and camphire, mixed together, are used for removing grease from silk.
